1 I believe RT is the new Faux News, only they are for Russia and not China. Obviously, because they are funded by Russia. If you look at their articles, they are not 100% Russia friendly though. I think they want to build high credibility among both parties by reporting totally factually, and then eventually lie about something important. Faux's problem was that everyone already knew they were bought and lie all the time, and this was just the straw that broke the camel's back.

1 If you want the best coverage of US politics, get it from people who have no vested interest in either side succeeding lol. Unfortunately, journalism is supposed to be without bias by merit

2 ▼ American Media IS covering it. We have OANN, War Room, and more crop up everyday. A lot of people don't know about them yet, but they need to be told how ignorant (not stupid) they are about current events, and they need to be told by us.

The best thing this is doing is curing our cultural indifference. It is not beyond the average american to scrutinize what we're told, and we are doing just that in greater numbers than we have in decades.

3 ▼ OANN is not comprehensive, nor is war room.

There's no "MAGA News" station with hourly weather and an assortment of finance and international.

Don't get me wrong, OANN, America's Voice, DTN, and to an extent even things like Breitbart and infowars, are GREAT, and yes they are "American media", but they aren't big media, or comprehensive media. They aren't my go to sources yet, just more places on the list of sites to check.

I'm a huge fan of RT for their international coverage, and opeds skewering liberals. It's just a shame there is no American equivalent.

1 ▼ Generally when we rail against the liberal media, we're not talking about the weather or finance, but it's a fair point that "our" media is a bit lopsided. I think that's because it was born out of necessity that way, but maybe as funding improves for them they'll get more well rounded.

1 ▼ It really is sad that official Russian govt reporting is the most unbiased on the planet.

1 ▼ Uh. change it to russian media.

Italian media is doing the same gaslighting everywhere.

Here you only hear about how Trump is a sore loser who's clinging to delusion, and how Biden is going to be a great guy.

▼ Our mainstream media is CIA controlled, if you understand that then things make so much more sense.
